Revised Post Office Site Plan Is Reviewed by City Council

by Mary Moien

Four years after the City of Greenbelt received a concept site plan from the US Postal Service (USPS) for a new facility in Greenbelt East, a revised site plan has been received with several substantial changes. At the September 23 city council meeting, community planner Kristen Ward, an architect for the USPS and a lawyer for the property owners reviewed new changes to the plan. At the current time, an at least twice-postponed hearing is set for December 15 on a property condemnation suit to remove a restrictive development clause and allow the site to be sold. This action will allow the post office facility to be built at last.

When the city council reviewed the plan in 1998, it supported the concept plan with a number of conditions related to pedestrian circulation, tree preservation and other issues. The most important issue, however, was that the post office maintain a retail facility in Roosevelt Center. At the meeting on the 23rd, it was assumed that the Postal Service has agreed to maintain the Roosevelt Center Post Office, but city staff members were unable to put their hands on a written agreement. Maintaining the post office is a "deal breaker;" the new large postal facility will not be approved if the smaller facility is not continued at the Center.

Buffer

The new postal facility will be constructed at the intersection of Hanover Parkway and Ora Glen Drive, with the main entrance on Ora Glen. In the planning process a major concern has been how the building will affect nearby residents of Windsor Green. The original site plan called for a 145-foot buffer between the building and the nearest homes, which sit on a hill overlooking the site.

The new site plan reduces that distance to 112 feet. Architect Constantine Seremetis indicated that changes in stormwater treatment regulations enacted in 2000 require the construction of a water quality area near the building. The need for this area, he said, requires that the building be moved somewhat back.

The new site plan also indi-

Pink Ribbon Bike Event Brings Bucks and Riders

by Sylvia Lewis

A festive air prevailed at the Bike4BreastCancer's Greenbelt Pink Ribbon Ride on Saturday September 21. The weather was beautiful, the fellowship was good and over $6,500 was raised through registrations, contributions and corporate sponsorships. Representatives from Doctors Community Hospital, a major sponsor of the event, and Y-ME, the major beneficiary of the funds, were on hand to talk about their services.

Kathy Betz, president of Bike4BreastCancer, rode her pink bicycle on a 25-mile route and also volunteered as a marshal. The local planning committee and the riders who participated declared the day a resounding success.

Ninety-two cyclists participated. Since their choice of routes ranged from two miles to 50 miles, there was a wide range of cycling experience. One woman, who had just bought her bicycle, said that she hadn't cycled at all while others said they cycle several thousand miles a year. Many participants were unfamiliar with Greenbelt. Eric Knudson, from Great Falls, Va., who cycles about 1,500 miles a year, heard about the ride

Sniper Peril Keeps Local Police Alert

During the sniper-caused emergency this week, Greenbelt Police Patrol Commander Lt. Thomas Kemp went to each Greenbelt school and met with principals. School Resource Officer David Buerger handled the emergency at Eleanor Roosevelt High School. Police Chief James Craze was out of town, attending the annual meeting of the National Association of Chiefs of Police.

Kemp told the News Review that other police "worked in a covert capacity checking around the perimeter of the schools." He also said officers working the 3-to-11 shift were called in early to handle calls. "Things are busier than normal, but not hectic," he said.

Kemp told council at Monday night's meeting that there would be a cruiser at each Greenbelt school the next day.

Quynn-Reno Is Promoted To Head Community Center

by Barbara Young

"Life is Good" says the screensaver on the computer of willowy, energetic Di Quynn-Reno, new Community Center Supervisor for the Greenbelt Recreation Department. Her predecessor in the position, Joe McNeal, moved on when he was appointed Assistant Director of Operations/Facilities for the Recreation Department.

Working for the city and working hard is nothing new for Quynn-Reno. She worked at the Aquatic Center for nine years and before that taught preschool for a year. "My personality is such that I want to take care of things," she says, "and I want things to be organized. My parents were extremely organized and I think it's a really good thing." She has no truck with things that are depressing either. Running is her

"big stress outlet."

Taking care of things in the Community Center means maintaining a building that is bursting with activity and helping its many tenants. Other facets of the job, in her words, are "promoting good relationships with Public Works to make sure things happen, and promoting good communication with people that come in with permits." The artists' wing of the building is full, she notes.

Quynn-Reno has been married for two years to Matt Reno. Her heritage is Welsh and German; his is Italian. Reno is Park Operations Supervisor for the City of Bowie. The couple commute together every day from their home 48 miles away at Route 50 and the Route 301 split. It's on

NPS '02 Budget Waiver Holds 17a. Jaeger Tract Allocations

by Elaine Skolnik

The clock has not yet run out on the decades-long desire of the City of Greenbelt to add the remaining undeveloped 17.43-acre Jaeger tract to the 1,150-acre Greenbelt Park as originally intended. Surrounded on three sides by the federal park, which is itself located within the corporate limits of Greenbelt, the Jaeger tract is south of Westchester Park Drive about 300 feet east of Kenilworth Avenue in the unincorporated Westchester Park community. The property is located within the Anacostia Watershed.

When the United States Congress in October 2001 approved an appropriations bill for the Department of the Interior for Fiscal Year 2002, it included, at the request of Congressman Steny Hoyer, $1 million for acquisition of the Jaeger tract, subject to matching funds. The hope of the National Park Service (NPS) has been to match the federal appropriation with local government monies, private donations and State funding.

Coming aboard at the request of the NPS to help in securing funds was the National Park Trust, a "Private Land Conservancy Saving American Parklands." There was concern that if not enough matching funds were committed by the end of the fiscal year (September 30, 2002) the $1 million appropriation for the Jaeger tract could be re-programmed for other purposes.

To prevent such a re-allocation from occurring, as Hoyer told the News Review, he recently obtained a waiver for the federal matching [funds] requirement on the $1 million included in the Park Service budget for Fiscal Year 2002.

According to Hoyer, this waiver clears the way for the $1 million to be spent by the Park Service, "contingent upon the city, the National Park Trust, and other private groups raising the remaining funds needed to purchase the lands."

The Greenbelt City Council has committed $100,000 of Program Open Space Funds toward a matching contribution to the federal funds. The Westchester Park community has raised about $9,000. The National Park Trust could also commit funds for the acquisition.

Negotiations

The sale price of the property has not yet been determined. Negotiations are currently ongoing between the NPS and the owners' representative, Ahmad Amer.

NPS has the final say on how much it will pay for the land. The owner, Community Management Company, is under no obligation to accept. However, Glenn Eugster, assistant regional director from the Partnerships Office of the National Capital Region of NPS, commented, "Everyone has been working very hard to make this happen [incorporating the Jaeger tract into Greenbelt Park]. We've made progress but we're not yet there. However, everyone appears optimistic that things will work out."

Uphoff Exhibit Fantastic Mix

by Barbara Hopkins

“My paintings are a vehicle to express the intense passion and spirit of the human condition on a highly personal level,” says Ridge Road artist and longtime teacher Linda Uphoff, exhibiting through Sunday at Mill River Gallery at Oella Mill in Ellicott City. Shown in the accompanying photo as she prepares a large canvas, “Hot and Cold #2” for exhibit, she uses a mix of brushes, sticks, cardboard, knives and fingers to create texture on canvas surfaces. In other exhibits she has even sewn beads onto her paintings. Some of her drawings are a mixed media combination of ink, watercolor, colored pencil, acrylic and crayon.

Currently teaching Continuing Education courses for Prince George’s Community College, Uphoff taught art at Greenbelt Middle School for 27 years. She also taught drawing and painting in the Community Center for several years and as a GAVA board member juried works for the Labor Day Festival exhibits.

Holder of an M.F.A. from Maryland Institute, she maintains a studio at Passageways in Riverdale. Uphoff is a sculptor as well and likes to build out sculptural fabrics, sometimes doing stitchery on them.

There are 26 pieces in the current exhibit. Some are large wall hangings and some paintings are framed. Mill River Gallery hours are Friday, 11 a.m. to 4 p.m.; Saturday, 11 a.m. to 5 p.m.; and Sunday, noon to 4 p.m.

On Sunday, October 20, from 2 to 5 p.m., the exhibit may be seen at the Passageways artist’s studio on 66th Avenue, Riverdale. For information, call 301-345-5386.

Letters to the Editor

THANKS!

I want to thank the warm, engaged and engaging people of Greenbelt, who gave me the honor of representing them in the Maryland State Legislature for 24 years.

It is said, and I believe, that politics is a “people business.” I always looked forward to my door-to-door campaigning in Greenbelt because it presented me with many opportunities to meet old friends and new, and to be reminded of just how supportive my Greenbelt constituents were of my legislative efforts.

Having the chance to know and help so many people I might not have encountered in any other capacity has encouraged me in times of doubt, bolstered me in times of grief and has given me an indestructible sense of purpose. You have been part of my life’s mission, and I thank you for that.

The next several months will be a period of adjustment for me, but I am sustained in part by my fond memories of the people of the 23rd District, and of Greenbelt particularly, and the many wonderful things we achieved together.

Wants Movie Info

As an infrequent movie goer, I have often wished that the Old Greenbelt Theatre’s ad in this newspaper would include a brief description of its films. Names of the actors, the genre or awards – anything to help those of us who don’t have a clue about most films by the title alone.

Three Strikes?

The recent increase in robberies with firearms in Greenbelt (for example, the four incidents reported in the September 19 News Review, involving five to six guns total) have got us thinking that maybe we should be treating the license to sell guns in Greenbelt the same way we treat the license to sell liquor.

It would be interesting if the police could report, when known, where the guns come from in crimes like this. I remember years ago when the papers reported that a University of Maryland student had threatened his professor with a handgun. Only the school’s Diamondback newspaper reported where the student bought the gun [in the] Beltway Plaza, very close to the scene of three of the four incidents mentioned above.

We were reminded of this after two men crashed their car near our worksite on Sunnyside Avenue on September 29, carrying a dozen handguns stolen from Schelin’s Gun Shop on Rhode Island Avenue in College Park. The men fled toward the metro service yard, making us fear they were making their way to Greenbelt. Luckily they were caught, although not until they were on the loose at least overnight.

I think that car crashing so close to Greenbelt, along with the sniper spree, should make all of us Greenbelters more closely scrutinize all area gun shops. We should tell them as clearly as we are telling TGI Friday’s that we will not allow the peace of our community to be threatened by incidents related to their businesses. And the issues of liquor and gun licenses are linked, witness the shooting at TGI Friday’s. Maybe it should be three strikes and you’re out – for both gun and liquor licenses?

"Building Bridges to the Family of God thru the Love of Christ"

St. Hugh's First Literacy Night Is Huge Success

by Leslie Hilliard

The first of four Family Literacy Nights was held at St. Hugh's School on September 26. Eighty-five parents and children attended the event. To create a theme and set the mood for the evening's topic, centerpieces of Indian corn and fall leaves were arranged around baskets of pencils at each table. The smell of cinnamon and spice wafted over the refreshment area.

The purpose of the event is to promote family involvement in the writing curriculum through a fun evening for parents and children of all grade levels. It enhances the traditional classroom-based writing program by bringing students, parents, and teachers together for a series of creative evening experiences. Each of the four nights planned will illustrate a writing concept and then have a writing activity for the family members to complete together. These activities will not only provide the students with additional writing practice, but also allow parents to develop a better understanding of established writing standards and expectations. This evening's topic was Word Choice – choosing precise nouns, action words, and accurate adjectives when writing a story.

To begin the evening's activities, Principal Mary Elizabeth Whelan began a discussion on the mechanics of simple sentence structure. She explained the difference between general nouns and more precise nouns and how this helps the reader to better "see" the author's idea. In addition to the several examples Whelan provided, many of the students shared their own examples. After nouns came a discussion of verbs and adjectives. Door prizes, donated by the Greenbelt Target store, were distributed throughout the evening and Safeway provided the school with pumpkin-shaped cookies and apple juice.

Whelan challenged the audience to use their five senses to create a story that followed the theme beginning with "I felt myself falling peacefully off the tree when all of a sudden" Some children began writing right away, stories unfolding in their minds rapidly. Others pondered a few moments, then set pencil to paper, writing without pause. Even those in kindergarten and younger had their stories captured by parents hurriedly recording their tales.

Over 15 children eagerly read their stories to the audience, their creativity expressing itself through vivid descriptions and varied plots. Others shared their stories with those at their tables. "Developing a solid writing curriculum is one of our goals for our Middle States Accreditation," said Whelan. "And we hope these events will be an entertaining way to bring our families out to the school."

"I really enjoyed it," remarked Martha Loutsch, mother of students in first, second, and eighth grades. So did the kids.

Korean Pastors Speak at Methodist Church

Mowatt Memorial United Methodist Church invites the community to hear a message from the visiting Korean Methodist ministers. Rev. Jong Man Lee (Deung Hwa Methodist Church, Nonsan, South Korea) and Rev. Mi Ja Jeong (Extension Ministry to Mission Training Center at Mokwon Theological Seminary, Daejeon, South Korea) will visit the church on Sunday, October 13 in conjunction with the exchange program between the South Conference of South Korea and the Baltimore-Washington Conference of the United Methodist Church of the United States of America. Rev. Lee will preach.

The two conferences made a sister relationship at the 218th Annual Conference last June in Washington, D.C. and the 48th South Annual conference last April in Korea. The delegates from both conferences had discussed continuing education for clergy, lay leadership development and youth camp ministry.

Two of the ministers will visit the six United Methodist churches in the conference in which the Korean pastors have served. South Conference is in Daejeon, Korea, which is 150 miles from Seoul, the capital city of South Korea. The conference was established at the General Conference of the Korean Methodist Church in 1954, immediately after the Korean War (1950-1953). As of July 2002, 472 churches, 622 ministers and 92,049 members are enrolled.

For more information visit the website of the South Conference, (www.nambukmc.com) or call Pastor DaeHwa Park at 301-474-9410.

through the Internet. When he was asked what he liked best about the ride he responded “Greenbelt.” Kathy Sanzaro, from Chevy Chase, said that she enjoyed the well-marked routes, the safe streets, “and the wonderful volunteers.” Others were impressed by the beautiful scenery and the light traffic along the routes.

Cyclists especially enjoyed having Gwen Vaccaro and staff from Pleasant Touch give free 15-minute massages after they returned from their ride. They were also pleased with the donuts, bagels, bananas, water and juice (donated by Raulins Bakery, Chesapeake Bagels, Greenbelt Co-op and CVS) that were available at the rest stop at Goddard Space Flight Center as well as at the start and finish of the rides.

Many cyclists commented on the high degree of camaraderie among riders and volunteers. They appreciated having Jill DiMauro from REI available to check their bikes. Unfortunately Jill was not nearby when Jay Elston got a nail in his back tire close to the rest stop at Goddard. Luckily participant Chris Mortellaro from Ellicott City was there to give him a hand in fixing the puncture.

feature of the event? The hill on Research Road had that dubious honor.

The ride received high marks from all participants, whether they followed J Davis, the honorary chair, on the two-mile route around Greenbelt Lake or completed the 50-mile route through BARC, Goddard Space Flight Center, Patuxent Wildlife Center and the WB&A Rail. When asked if they would participate in the event if it were to be held again next year, the answer was a unanimous yes!

the Chester River near the Bay.

Quynn-Reno still sounds like a honeymooner when she talks about her husband. “He can fix anything,” she says, “and we have renovated the entire house. I know how to tear down a wall. I know now that it’s not that difficult to lay a kitchen floor. I’ve done it.” She says she can’t believe she’s already been married for two years.

“We go out on the Bay real often – he fishes and I read. We can see water from our front lawn, and we can get our boat into the Chester River water in less than a minute. I always feel like I’m on vacation, living there.”

Quynn-Reno loves to read, especially selections for the Oprah Book Club. Ever organized, she shelves her books according to the date they were published.

Chapter 11.5-Noise Control

It’s Friday night and that means it’s time to relax and cut loose with some friends. But, before you let loose there are a few things to know about the City’s noise ordinance.

Jammin’ times are only allowed before 9pm or after 7am on weekdays and before 9pm or after 9am on weekends. That means any device such as TVs, radios, stereos or musical instruments that produce noise or sound in excess of 55 decibels.

If Julie Andrews is belting out “The Sound of Music” from that new Dolby surround sound system you have, you may want to invest in some headphones, since the maximum distance for any sound-producing device is 50 feet from the source.

School’s out and hanging out at Roosevelt Center with your friends is the best way you know to chill before dealing with the dreaded homework that has piled up in your room. Larry, Moe and Curly are already there. Yelling, hooting, hollering or singing in a public place is a noise violation. Parks and public places are for everyone to enjoy, and so, be considerate of others!

The victim said he was stopped at a traffic light at the intersection of Greenbelt Road at 62nd Avenue when he heard people arguing nearby. He then heard a loud bang and felt his left arm go numb, thereupon realizing that he had been shot. A passenger in the vehicle drove him to the hospital where police were called. Investigation is continuing.

Robbery

9000 block Breezewood Terrace, September 28, 12:30 a.m., a man was walking to his vehicle when he was approached from behind by the suspect, who produced a handgun and announced a robbery. Area of Edmonston Terrace and Edmonston Court, October 1, 8:47 p.m., a man was walking home when he was approached by several suspects armed with baseball bats. With the bats, they struck the victim in the chest and stomach and took his wallet before fleeing on foot. The victim was taken to Doctors Hospital for treatment. Greenbelter Philip Brandis plays the male protagonist in “On Golden Pond” opposite Eugenia Sorgnit of New Carrollton in The Prince George’s Little Theater production. A Greenbelt Gardener

by Rosie Rhubarb

Now is prime planting time in the flower garden. Autumn is the time to plant spring flowering bulbs like daffodils and tulips and it is one of the best times to plant, transplant and divide perennial flowering plants. Though the shadows of the drought and first frost loom over the garden, work can be done now that looks to the picture of the garden and its continuity.

First frost is a special time in the garden. The annual flowers and vegetables planted last spring will, with few exceptions, die when our night temperatures slip below 32°. I’ve been told the average first date for us here in Greenbelt is October 15. So a frost could even happen next week. It seems as if in recent years the first frost has arrived by the end of October. It is time to be prepared for the end of the summer garden. Frost will kill off tomato, pepper and squash plants. Annual flowers with the exception of snaps, pinks, calendula, will die with frost. Flowers used for drying should be harvested before frost to keep their color. Examples are hydrangea, globe amaranth, statice and strawflowers.

The drought continues and there is no end in sight. Keep watering trees and shrubs regularly so they will be in good shape to enter the winter. When planning next year’s garden, bear in mind that even if drought conditions don’t still exist, it will be a long time before the ground water supply is replenished to its normal level.

cates that the building, while not changing its entrance, will now front more on Hanover Parkway, since the retail parking lot has been shifted to that side of the building.

Remaining Issues

Council has now identified 20 specific issues remaining to be resolved. Among the most important are the written agreement about the current post office and the issue of the vegetative buffer between the new facility and Windsor Green. At the urging of Councilmember Rodney Roberts, the latter issue was added to the list of concerns. The post office must obtain firm information on the size of the new water control area and report back to council on the maximum footage of buffer that will remain.

Another major issue concerns constructing medians in front of the building. The USPS appears to consider these as “off-site” improvements for which they have no budgetary responsibility. The city sees otherwise.

Just as regulations have changed for wastewater treatment, council indicated that city regulations for traffic calming have also changed since 1998. Councilmember Ed Putens indicated that the USPS earlier had indicated that medians impeded the turning radius of postal trucks.

The city also wants to see more details on the lighting plan, as lighting can seriously affect the nearby houses.

The other issues appear to be relatively minor, which the USPS is expected to agree to. These include landscaping, benches, signs and the designation of a USPS route to eliminate heavy truck traffic in residential areas.

Council instructed the city manager to transmit their concerns to the USPS as soon as possible. The letter to Project Manager Jack Gustafsson is dated September 25. The letter strongly restates the city’s support for building the new postal facility. Representative Steny Hoyer confirmed his support in a communication to the News Review, “I know that [the postal facility] is a high priority for both the USPS and Greenbelt and I am working aggressively to move this project forward in the next few months.”

Council noted that the Prince George’s County Planning Board will meet to review the plans in October and the National Capital Planning Commission will discuss the plans in early November. The city’s concerns should be addressed before these meetings. The News Review has been informed that the USPS will meet with the city next week.

The Chesapeake Bay: Cleaning Its Water

Dr. James E. Cassidy of Greenbelt East will give a presentation geared to middle school students at the National Wildlife Visitor Center on Saturday, October 19 at 2 p.m. The characteristics of three different soils will be demonstrated. Methods of removing pollutants, mainly soluble nitrogen and phosphorus compounds, will be covered. Slides of various locations in the Northeast Branch of the Anacostia River will show how effective these methods are in removing these pollutants as water flows from two headwaters in Greenbelt East to the flood plain. The problems in this river basin are like those of the Chesapeake Bay basin.

This presentation is sponsored by the Chemical Society of Washington and the American Chemical Society as part of the 2002 programs for National Chemistry Week, October 20 to 26.

For reservations leave a message with name, number in the party and phone number by calling 202-659-2650 or by emailing to chemsocwash@starpower.net.

NWLVC is located off Powder Mill Road between the Baltimore-Washington Parkway and Rt. 197 just south of Laurel.

Upcoming Memorial Concert Features 13-year-old Pianist

by Konrad Herling

The Greenbelt Arts Center's second Albert K. Herling concert will be held Friday, November 22 at 8 p.m. at the Greenbelt Community Center. One of this nation's foremost artists, Santiago Rodriguez, first proposed the idea of holding a concert to honor Herling, a Greenbelt outstanding citizen and activist who brought many cultural events to the city and gave several of his own benefit concerts.

It was shortly after the dedication of "Al's Place," a large carved stone bench now in front of the library in March of 1997, that concert pianist Rodriguez expressed this thought to me. "Why not dedicate a special series in your father's name to inspire new, upcoming pianists?" My response was that if he would perform at the first concert, I would help get it started.

Rodriguez' benefit concert in November 2000, raised several hundred dollars for the Greenbelt Arts Center and the American Cancer Society. However, it raised the ceiling as to what the arts in Greenbelt can be. Rodriguez, who was Herling's piano professor at the University of Maryland, made all in attendance at ease. The audience became his class, as he educated each of us about what Mozart, Chopin and other composers were trying to convey through their pieces. Equally important, he was able to show the connection that these composers had with Herling – passion, a zest for life and the ability to connect with others.

The concert taking place in November (the Friday before Thanksgiving) will feature three artists: flutist Joseph Cunliffe and guitarist Giorgia Cavallaro, who perform together as a wonderful duet known as "Flutar," and 13-year-old pianist Zenas Chang. (Next week's article will concentrate on "Flutar" and their dramatic splash on the American arts scene.)

Chang is currently entering his third year of study at the University of Maryland. While he has not decided on a major yet, he hopes to receive a degree in a biologically related field.

Chang also has been a member of the Greenbelt Swim Team and the Maryland Boy Choir. Larry Hilliard, one of the swim team organizers, urged that I get in touch with Chang and his family and try to arrange for him to play at the Arts Center. I did get in touch and asked if he'd consider playing piano as part of the Greenbelt New Year program.

I believe that anyone who attended his program would remember New Year's Eve 2002 for good reason. On a personal note, he played a few pieces that I remember my father playing. He played with clarity, a delicate touch when it was called for, and passion when appropriate.

Chang is currently pursuing a citation in piano performance with Dr. Cleveland Page, the chairman of the University of Maryland's piano department. He has studied piano with Dr. Page for the past two years and has studied the piano for five years overall, previously with Ellen Sakai and Dr. Hui-yen Chang. As a second instrument, he has studied the cello for three years with Diana Fish, a member of the United States Marine Corps Band.

Chang has received numerous awards, including first place in the 1999 Saul Roas Memorial Scholarship Competition and first prize in the 2000 Gertrude S. Brown Memorial Piano Concerto Competition. In the same year, he participated in a master class given at the National Museum of American History. That fall he performed at the Asbury Methodist Village.

Upon concluding his performance last New Year's Eve, I asked Chang and his parents, if he'd consider performing as part of a program to honor my father in the coming year. The Arts Center, and the community as a whole, is most fortunate that his answer was "yes."

Reservations can be made by calling the Greenbelt Arts Center at 301-441-8770.

Funds raised from the concert will go towards the Greenbelt Arts Center and the Greenbelt Lions Club, which began its preschool eye screening program for kids six months to five years.

Gleaners Needed to Pick Food for Hungry

by Barbara Likowski

Vegetables that could go to feed the hungry will rot in the fields instead if volunteers to pick them are not found by this Saturday, October 12. According to Pam Koch, director of the United States Department of Agriculture's (USDA) Harvest for the Hungry program, pickers are needed to glean in USDA fields of the Henry Wallace Beltsville Agricultural Research Center (BARC). The food picked at BARC will be distributed to the hungry in the D.C. Metropolitan area.

Turnips, potatoes and string beans are ready to be harvested. Volunteers are desperately needed for what will probably be the last harvest of the season. Last Saturday 300 Girl Scouts picked as part of their service project. Due to light turnout, more volunteers are needed. This can be a fun family outing and an educational and social event while providing food for some of the thousands of hungry children and adults.

Directions

People who can help are asked to meet in front of Building 3 on Circle Drive on Route 1 in Beltsville at 10 a.m. on Saturday. This is the third of the brick buildings across from the Agricultural Library. The building is topped by a weather vane and clock. Double parking is permitted. People might want their children to use the rest room facilities in the building before going on to the fields.

At 10 a.m. someone will come to escort volunteers to the vegetable fields. Escorts may be BARC scientists who can tell about the work done in the fields.

Latecomers may call Koch's cell phone at 1-703-409-1900 and she will come back and take them to the fields.

Volunteers should wear hats, sunscreen and garden gloves and bring drinks. The area is not buggy (except for friendly insects such as grasshoppers and ladybugs).

Food

USDA crops are experimental to help farmers. Nothing is genetically engineered and nothing is sprayed; the food is organic. Rather than plow the produce under after full grown, a gleaner initiative was passed by Congress in 1997 giving permission for the food to go to the poor.

Koch, who is also a volunteer for a Virginia based organization, "Food for Others," said that group has warehouses from which the food can be distributed. Food goes not only to Virginia but to other parts of the Metropolitan area.

People who have a food pantry in their church or area that they would like food to go to, can call Koch for information about having it included in the program. Volunteers may bring a plastic bag and take some food home to their families.

If, on Saturday, the sky is overcast or there is mist or a few light showers, the picking will go on. In case of heavy rain, it may be cancelled. If not sure about the weather, call Koch at 9 a.m. Saturday at 1-703-476-2952.

Future Plans

The Harvest for the Hungry program begins picking about the second week in July. Many kinds of vegetables are picked in season – tomatoes, peppers, squash, etc.

To arrange to pick or to bring a service group to pick, people may call Koch and set a date for next year. Usually this begins in March but people may call her any time to set a date for picking at 1-703-476-2952.
